Here's one case: John C. Ripley, the well-known blacksmith, Oxford St., South Paris, Me., says: "I was quite miserable for several months with an attack of kidney trouble. I had pain through the small of my back and my kidneys didn't act regularly. Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me in a remarkably short time."

OCTOBER.

The wind and the leaves are playing today. Dangling and whirling, away and away. While the world, it seems a paradise. With the golden sun and blue, blue skies.

"Gleeful not," their bright eyes seem to smile. "For we must keep a little while. He, who has made us all, knows best, And sends the flowers a winter-rest."

Cold days must come, but 'neath the snow Earth's heart with new life soon will glow. The brooklets wake, the bluebirds sing. And silver willows welcome spring.

INVADERS BELGIUM. As the poet hath said of the Assyrians of old, The Germans came down like wolves on the fold. And the Belgian soil, hill, valley and plain With the blood of her sons was moistened like rain.

O, heavy the tread of the marching hoards! O, vengeful the gleam of the bayoneted! As the lightning's swift bolt cleaves the air in its flight, The incendiaries' torch pierced the darkness of night.

Dazed innocence with wondering eyes, In mute appeal for succor cries. Their homes destroyed, their fathers slain, Rough soldiers all aid disperse. Great warriors there no arm to save. To shield the innocent hovering near at hand, No guardian angel hovering near at hand, To succor an afflicted, a down-trodden land!

Justice, though sometimes long delayed, Shall measure out its full reward. And tyranny, though in defensive gear arrayed, Shall feel the vengeance of a righteous God.

SHE GIGGLED. He said, "The day is rather warm." She giggled. He thought perhaps it meant a storm. She giggled. He looked round and said, "Well, I declare, He took the proffered easy chair. The picture on the wall is his picture there!" She giggled.

Her Pa and Ma went out to walk. She giggled. "Now, I thought the man, 'perhaps she'll talk.'"

He then grew bold and took her hand. Said something none could understand. He talked of art and books and shows. He talked of art and books and shows. He talked of art and books and shows. He talked of art and books and shows.

At ten o'clock he rose to go. She giggled. He said, "I've enjoyed my visit so." She giggled. He said, "I've enjoyed my visit so." She giggled. He said, "I've enjoyed my visit so." She giggled.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running ear, which is usually discharging a thick, yellowish fluid. Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation is removed, the hearing cannot be restored to its normal condition. Hearing will be restored forever; nine cases out of ten are cured by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give you a hundred dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

FALL PROTECTIVE WORK AGAINST GIPSY AND BROWN-TAIL MOTHS

Effective Means of Reducing Further Damage to Orchard and Forests by Gypsy and Brown-Tail Moths

In the areas infested by the gypsy moth the brown-tail moth, much effective work can be done in the fall to reduce the damage that these insects are likely to cause the following year, according to entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture. The caterpillars of the brown tail moth spin a web in the fall which remains on the tips of the twigs and branches during the winter. These webs should be cut and burned so that injury will not be caused by the caterpillars the following summer. Particular attention should be given to webs of this insect on trees which grow around dwellings or in orchards.

The apple, pear, cherry, oak and willow are among the plants which are favored as food by the brown-tail moth caterpillars. In order to minimize the damage which is likely to result, as much time as possible should be devoted to cutting and burning worthless or seedling apple trees and wild cherry trees and brush. If this is done along the roadways and fences, the appearance of the region will be greatly improved. Care should be taken to protect pine and other coniferous trees, and hickory and ash should not be cut as they are not favored for food either by the caterpillars of the gypsy moth or by those of the brown-tail moth. A general clean-up such as has been mentioned will greatly assist in controlling this insect. The oak is a favored food of the brown-tail moth and of the gypsy moth, and wherever it is possible to eliminate oaks, less annoyance from these pests will be experienced.

In cutting wood in the winter for the purposes of fuel, the farmer would do well to select and cut trees which are favored as food by these insects. In this way he will not only secure the fuel which he desires, but will at the same time decrease the food supply of the pests mentioned. It is needless to say that in cutting wood for fuel, all sickly or diseased trees should be selected so that the stand that remains will be healthy and vigorous. Each owner must make the selection for himself, but a great deal can be accomplished by planning the work a little in advance so that the necessary amounts of fuel can be obtained, the preferred food plants of these insects reduced in number, and the condition of the wood improved.

The gypsy moth occurs in the egg stage during the winter, and much valuable work can be done in bringing about its control by treating the egg masses with creosote, applied with a brush. This destroys the eggs so that the next brood of caterpillars is reduced.

For the information of residents of the district infested by the gypsy moth and the brown-tail moth, it should be said that this area has been placed under quarantine by the Federal Horticultural Board and that nursery stock and other plants can not be shipped outside the area unless the trees or plants have been examined by an authorized inspector. The same products, as well as Christmas trees, forest products, and stone and quarry products, can not be shipped outside the area infested by the gypsy moth unless they have been inspected and certified to be free from this insect. The purpose of this quarantine is to prevent these insects from becoming established in other parts of the United States.

Worms of the brown-tail moth which are present on the trees during the winter, and egg clusters of the gypsy moth which may be on trees, cordwood, lumber, boxes, crates, or other containers which are stored near infested trees, are likely to be shipped long distances. For this reason, all owners should be particularly careful to keep their grounds free from these insects, and, in case shipments of any kind are to be made, to notify the nearest inspector so that there will be no delay in the examination made in order that the goods may go forward without disappointment either to the shipper or purchaser.

Gypsy moth or brown-tail moth infestation should be treated with special care on grounds from which trees or plant products are to be shipped. The work on these insects which is being carried on by the Department is directed from the branch office of the Bureau of Entomology, 43 Tremont street, Boston, Mass.

Should Raise More.

The Millinocket Times makes the suggestion that Maine should raise its own beef, and really there seems no reason why it shouldn't. Vast areas of land are practically useless in Maine, useless because they have not been put to use. Timber land owners have great patches of land which have been burnt over and never replanted to timber and a good deal of this land is near enough to town to make it valuable as farmland. The land question in this State has got to be looked into before we make much progress.

In the first place it would be an admirable idea to make land owners show their title to such land and failing to do so forfeit to the State. Secondly all land that is not put to some use should be taxed at such a rate as would bring it into use. Then there would be no trouble about raising beef, pork and foodstuffs enough to feed a population twenty or thirty times that of the State at the present time, and one would find no worrying about the high cost of living. If the acreage now in disuse was let to people at a reasonable rental the great production from such lands would necessarily lead to a fall in prices and one would not have to pay for the surplus from Boston and other markets, plus high railway rates and various commission merchants' fees.

$2525 for Maine Boys and Girls.

The Maine Corn Packers' association has arranged prizes amounting to $2525 to be given to boys and girls who raise corn for the season of 1916. There are to be prizes in 11 counties and they will range from $1 to $50 according to the value of the work done. Beside these cash prizes there are to be five scholarships for the University of Maine, each entitling the winner to a free year at the University. The conditions of the contest are that each contestant shall plant a quarter of an acre of corn, and shall do all the work from the preparation of the land to the harvesting of the crop and its delivery to the canners. The award of the prize will be considered in the light of the work done on the land, the kind of the crop and ten specimen ears.

SANATORIUM AT HEBRON TRANSFERRED TO STATE.

The present Legislature passed an act entitled "An Act to Provide for the Care and Treatment of Tubercular Persons" by the terms of which the five persons who should acquire by purchase, lease or otherwise, Sanatoria in such locations as in the judgment were best adapted for their purposes, and the sum of $75,000 was appropriated for the use of the trustees by said act.

The members and trustees of the Maine State Sanatorium association, believing that by this act the State of Maine is finally and fully committed to the proper care and treatment of sufferers from tuberculosis, have transferred to the State the sanatorium at Hebron, together with all of its equipment and invested funds.

This sanatorium is recognized as one of the most complete and efficient in the country.

The property thus acquired by the State consists of real estate and equipment which cost about $210,000, cash and accounts receivable in the amount of about $10,000 and endowment funds of about $80,000, making a total of about $300,000.

In addition to the above the income of the Chamberlain endowment fund of $200,000, also may pass to the State, but this will be determined later.

In payment for the above the State has assumed all current outstanding bills of the institution amounting to about $12,000, and has paid to its trustees the sum of $15,000, which will be used by the trustees only for the purpose of meeting sundry legal and moral obligations of the sanatorium. The balance, if any, will be returned to the State.

The transaction is therefore a virtual gift of this entire property to the State.

One of the conditions of the deed conveying the property to the State is as follows:

"To the end that the purposes and hopes of the founders of said sanatorium may be fully met, and in order that the financial aid given to it by its friends and benefactors in the past shall continue to be used for the purposes for which it was given, said State of Maine further agrees that the property thus purchased shall be used in its present location as a sanatorium for the care and treatment of tubercular persons; that only so-called curable cases shall be admitted to it for treatment; that its buildings and grounds shall be maintained and kept up from year to year in the same general condition as heretofore; that the service and treatment accorded to patients shall be of the quality of the same high standard of efficiency as in the past and that in all respects said institution shall be continued and conducted of the first-class for the care and treatment of tubercular persons."

This condition has been accepted by the State, so that all who have contributed to the sanatorium in the past may now rejoice that this great institution is to continue along the broad lines established by its founders and be in the future as it has been heretofore, "one of the first-class for the care and treatment of sufferers from tuberculosis."

BETHEL.

Award $7,500.

Lillian T. Denmore, the Portland nurse who sued Guy L. Thurston, postmaster at Bethel, for $50,000 for breach of promise, was awarded $7,500 by the jury in the Supreme court, after two hours deliberation.

The whole matter will now go to the Law court, for counsel will file a motion for a new trial on the grounds that the verdict was excessive. Fifty thousand dollars was the sum sought in the suit.

The court declared that the defendant broke his promise to marry and therefore he was liable. Judge Savage said that the effect of this on the plaintiff's feelings, her humiliation and her reputation must be considered in arriving at the amount. A woman he said, is entitled to recover whether the defendant is worth a penny or a million. His wealth or lack of it must have nothing to do with the question and the only point to be considered must be the damages done to the plaintiff.

Mr. Thurston has a divorced wife, Elizabeth Thurston. On August 24th of last year the announcement of Mr. and Miss Denmore were sent out to personal friends. Mr. Thurston broke the engagement by letter, September 4th following. He notified her that he intended to marry Bessie Burns, a former sweetheart with whom he had previously broken an engagement.

A delightful evening was spent with Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Gehring at their beautiful home on Broad street, when the members of their households and a half dozen invited guests met to hold a reception in honor of their 27th wedding anniversary. The rooms were decorated with beautiful roses and chrysanthemums. Music and games with a short program were enjoyed and refreshments served.

Mrs. Mary Open has returned from a visit with her daughter in Ohio. The leaves have felt the death of nature and are falling fast. Now Thanksgiving will soon be here. Who will help some unfortunate person to a good dinner or some clothes for winter? Then find employment if any can be found. We need of suffering in the West for want of employment and that good women are the relief helpers.

Farmers are shipping their potatoes and apples.

D. M. Kimball it at home now at the "Mountainside cottage" and in quite good health.

The Limit of Faultfinding.

Jones was one of those men who grumble at everything and everybody. He was once attacked by inflammatory rheumatism and was carefully nursed by his wife, who was very devoted to him in spite of his faultfinding disposition. His suffering caused her to burst into tears sometimes as she sat by his bedside.

One day a friend came in and asked him how he was getting on. "Heavily," he exclaimed: "and it's all my wife's fault."

"Is it possible?" asked the friend, in surprise.

"Yes. The doctor told me that humidity was bad for me, and there that woman sits and cries, just to make it moist in the room."

HOW TO PACK APPLES.

The standard apple barrel is 26 inches between heads, diameter of head 17-18 inches, circumference at bulge 64 inches. It holds three bushels.

All the barrels should be carefully "faced." The quality of the apples in the "face" should not mislead the buyer, but should be a fair sample of the contents of the package.

Corrugated circular card board is often used against the top and bottom of the barrel to prevent bruising the fruit. These can be purchased at from one to two cents apiece, according to quality, and are a good investment.

The "face" of the barrel is made by placing a series of circles of apples in the bottom of the empty barrel. The bottom of the barrel forms the top when the package is headed.

When the first circle around the outside is completed, the next circle is placed. This circle being smaller, it will contain several apples less than the larger circle. The "face" is completed by finishing in the same manner.

The face should be firm when finished, with each apple setting snug against the other. The apples in the face are placed with the stem end next to the barrel head.

The remainder of the barrel is quickly filled by a half bushel basket. "Rack" the barrel after each basket is emptied, so that it may be completely filled.

The barrel should be filled in this manner until within a few inches of the top. The "tail" or crown layer" is then placed. It is placed with the stems upward and should project about 1.5 inches above the ends of the staves. The centre should be a little higher.

A corrugated paper cap is now put on next the barrel head. A barrel press is used in forcing the head down. The top hoop is removed and the second hoop slightly raised.

Great care must be used in getting the pack firm. Apples shrink, and if the barrel is not well "racked" while being filled, it will become slack, causing the fruit to bruise.

Apples for storage should be packed and placed in cold storage as soon as possible after picking for best results.

ONLY IN MEMORY.

Prelude.
You ask of me an old farmer,
That I leave for a season my farm.
My hogs, my sheep and my cattle,
To mount the chariot behind me.
With one of the muses to drive,
Leaving behind me all cares and duties.
Looked up in the land of the living,
Oh, what can you care for my stories
The poorest of doggerel.
You have at command the old masters
With thought and with language sublime;
My lyre is broken, neglected,
And the visions that float in my fancy
Will never be sung.

Do you remember that Sabbath in summer,
Our stroll with your arm around me,
O'er the moss covered wall through the orchard
To the yard 'neath the tall elm tree?
We stood by the graves of the loved ones,
The loved ones gone on before.
Through the vale of darkness and mystery
To the home on that beautiful shore:
Engraved on the tablets of stone
The years of earth they did stay.
We thought of those that had vanished,
Since the Angel had called them away.

We sat on a knoll in the orchard
On the grass 'neath the fruit laden trees,
Watched the changing shadows and sunshine,
As they swayed in the soft summer breeze.
The squirrel, we watched with his apple,
As he chattered and chattered his call.
Then nimbly skipped over the branches
And jumped and hid in the wall:
We gazed over the valley and hillsides,
Cared not for the world and its scene:
We caught just a glimpse of the autumn,
Stealing softly o'er summer's deep green.

Could I paint you the wondrous beauty
I've seen on these hillsides since then,
I could claim for myself the glory
Of wielding a magical pen.
I've watched o'er this fairer landscape,
Saw autumn, her robes unfold,
One morn in a warm flush of sunlight
Her garments were crimson and gold.
Time waits not to gaze at their beauty,
Though his pathway with roses be strewn,
Down, down, "neath the tramp of his tyrant
In dust and mud are they thrown.
Today as I look from my window,
Alas, let the curtain not fall
Desolation from her ruined old castle,
Sits there in her marble hall.

PROTECT THRUSHES.

Investigations Show That They Do a Great Deal of Good and Little Harm to the Farmer.

That thrushes—the group of birds in which are included robins and bluebirds—which are included of good and very little do a great deal of good and very little harm to agriculture is the conclusion reached by investigators of the department who have carefully studied the habits of these birds. Although there are within the limits of the United States 11 species of thrushes, five of which are commonly known as robins and bluebirds, the other six include the Townsend's, the olive-backed, and the gray hermit thrushes.

The robins and bluebirds nest close to the houses, and even the shiest of the other species are content with woodland or swamp. For this reason the thrushes are among the best known and most carefully protected of native American birds, and at times their numbers become so great that it is feared they will do much harm to crops and fruit. The recent investigations of the department, however, show that there is very little ground to this fear. On the other hand, they destroy such a vast number of insects that it is probable that without them many crops would suffer serious damage.

Of all the thrushes, the robin is probably the best known. It has been frequently accused of destroying fruits and berries, but it has now been ascertained that this only occurs in regions that are so thickly settled that there is no wild fruit upon which the robin may subsist. In some years the bird is a great pest in the olive orchards of California, but it is probable that they are driven to the orchards because of the scarcity of native berries at these times. Where a wild bird is available, the birds seem to prefer this to the cultivated varieties.

Like the robin, the bluebird is very domestic, but unlike the robin, it does not prey upon any cultivated product or work any injury whatever to the fruit grower. During the fruit season in fact, it seems, therefore that the common practice of encouraging the bluebird to nest near houses by placing convenient boxes in which it may build its home is thoroughly justified.

A detailed description of the habits of the robins and bluebirds is contained in the Department Bulletin No. 171. Bulletin No. 250, which has just been published, takes up the habits of the six other species of the thrush group which are not quite so well known. These birds are quite common in the United States, but feed principally on insects and fruit which they eat from the ground instead of picking up from the tree. There is therefore no reason why the wood thrush should not be rigidly protected.

How little the most of us realize the paths and tragedy in the little things connected with every day life. The life drama that has been rehearsed in our midst during a past week, while it has interested us, has not touched our finer sensibilities, perhaps. Day after day we have seen the crowded court room and watched the shifting scenes pass in kaleidoscopic review before us.

—We have seen the aged mother trying to condone the crime caused by the waywardness of her daughter, the pathetic grief of the homeless child, just coming into womanhood, burdened with a mother's shame and a father's crime, and the poor, weak unbalanced prisoner who loved, but still destroyed.

We have listened to the laugh and jest, the merry quip and sarcasm of the law. We have laughed with the crowd, with hardly a thought of the bitter sorrow that must fill the hearts of the leading actors in this scene.

A fellow being on trial for his life. A life, which, however humble it might be, has its own little niche in the world's activities. Whether he be responsible or irresponsible, let us be lenient in our judgments and reserve our judgment for who can tell what he would do under similar conditions, and in a like environment.—Calebroom News.

Real Poverty No Inspiration.

To those people who think that poverty is an inspiration to good work and mend these remarks:

"That there is some connection between the wages a man earns and the length of his life has long been known. That his general health may depend at any particular time on the amount of money he is earning is also a commonplace.

From the standpoint of health, it is not a disadvantage, of course, to be obliged to live largely on simple food; there are a great many people who are digging their graves with their teeth who would be better off if they were not able to afford many of the things they are purchasing. But there is a limit below which people may go. There is a nervousness and worry about the immediate future when wages get below certain points which impairs vigor."

The boy or girl in the slums has every reason to want to rise and get out of the slums. It is difficult to get a start in the right surroundings. Also, living in stifling heat in a noisome tenement in winter and suffering from the cold in an inclination to make for good health and a better life.

The lack of proper food does not incline a fellow to seek hard labor and does not qualify him for calm, steady and cool thinking. The absence of decent clothing causes him to lack the "front" order to get even a hearing when the average fellow goes after a job. Real poverty—no help to anybody.

WHO WILL GAIN POSSESSION OF THE EARTH?

The great war which is now raging in Europe, naturally raises the question of the future mastery of that portion of the world. Should there be a decisive outcome to the struggle, the victorious power would be in a position to dictate terms to Europe; and from the mastery of Europe it would be but a step to the position of world supremacy.

There exists however an impassable barrier in the pathway to this coveted goal of power. The Word of the Almighty has declared that there will never again be upon this earth a successor to imperial Rome. No conqueror will arise who will be able to bring the world to his feet. No nation will ever be able to bring all the other nations into subjection.

This is plainly stated in the prophecy of Daniel, chapter two, where, in explaining to the king of Babylon his dream concerning the great image, the prophet Daniel declared: "And whereas thou savest the feet and toes, part of potters' clay and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided; . . . And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with clay, the kingdom shall not cleave one to another, but they shall be as iron mixed with clay."

Since the decline and fall of the monarchy of Rome, there have been repeated efforts to weld together into solid mass the broken fragments of that empire. Clovis, Charlemagne, Napoleon, and Napoleon III, have become rulers of the world; but none of them could cement the iron and clay of the prophetic image. They were all against the fiat of heaven. As a writer has forcibly expressed it: "The earth reeled under the fierce charges of the world-empire grasping warlords, but the Word of the Lord stood fast, and Europe remained divided."

Not has the effort to bind the nations together into one by marital alliances been any more successful. The royal families have intermarried very extensively, but the ties thus formed have accomplished nothing toward political union. King George of England is cousin to the German Kaiser, and the Czar of Russia is a relative to prevent war. In no instance has there been a cleaving of the kingdoms through the marriage of the "mingling" of which the prophet said: "There is to be another and a third universal kingdom, foretold in the 'stone' of this prophetic dream, which 'smote' iron and clay, and brake them to pieces." Dan. 2:34. For of the stone it was said by the prophet, that it 'became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth'; and in explanation of this portion of the dream the prophet said: "In the days of these kings shall the God of the heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Dan 2:35, 44.

We are living today at a time when all the events pointed out by inspired prophecy as marking the approach of this kingdom, are with but one or two exceptions, in the past. Almost the last sign of its coming was stated by the Savior in the words: "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Matt. 24:14. That this work has now almost been accomplished, every person knows who is acquainted with the extent of Christian Missionary effort at the present time.

Very sincerely yours,

POULTRY TREATMENT.

A correspondent of Our Dumb Animals in California, who recently has been stirred up to pity for some fowl under the care of a very kind-hearted Christian family who do not understand them," sends the following suggestions on the care of poultry:

I believe that hens and chickens are very much like human beings. They have their different personalities. Some are cross, some pliant, some in temper, some good, some bad, some not. Some have better heads for locality than others, and all get frantic and bewildered if chased around by a big enemy in shape of man, woman, boy, girl or dog.

They respond to gentle treatment, and it pays in the long run to handle them carefully. They are not likely to thrive if caught and held head downward, or by wing or wings or in any uncomfortable way. I get out of patience when those who treat their hens in that way assert that fowls are fools, know nothing. Any one who really loves them, who has been at their cry of distress or trouble, who has seen them at first sign of drooping, studies to find out what is the matter, will find it pays.

The Woman and the Skunk.

A woman whose chicken pen had been raided numerous times lately by a skunk, was fortunate enough to apprehend the critter when she visited the biddies one morning a few days ago.

The average person usually fights a skunk from a safe distance, but this woman with the loss of her poultry in mind promptly pounced upon the chicken thief and grabbed the little striped animal by the tail. For a time she was in the same predicament as the historic individual who caught a Tartar, for she did not seem to be able to dispose of her capture and she disliked exceedingly to let go.

She was anxiously watched at a respectful distance by the neighbors and had the premises mostly to herself, as she carried the squirming and kicking animal around the yard, and implored somebody to come and cut its throat. Finally, her woman wit solved the situation, for at her suggestion some of the men folks bravely lifted a barrel with water and then immediately retired to afford her an opportunity to hold the skunk under water until it was drowned. And still, there are some of us who insist that women are not competent to let go.

"Madame," shouted the angry neighbor, "your little Cosmo has just thrown a brick

THE DREAMER.

"Loved and honored for words of beauty,
That gave men a taste of Heaven;
And teach them those lives alone are worthy
That to highest thoughts are given."
Long hours they gaze on dreamy heights,
Bathed in dull mist or sheen,
The sun emits its varying light,
All nature smiles between.
The dreamer reads in every stage,
Sweet thoughts in every scene.
While all the common-way grows bright,
Like moving pictures seen.

Oh, wealth of dreamer on Life's way!
Nor loves Ambition's gold;
For better Nature's melody,
Than wealth of kings, untold.
Who hears a song in rippling waves,
Music in every passing breeze.
While psalms from warbler's breast and throat
Make musical the trees.

Sees from the majestic mountain top,
A prayer unheard and willing down,
The curtains in by morn and gloom,
Inspired by incense all around.
As the white lip on the lake,
Dips down to kiss the water's pure,
Nor stoops to touch the fetid soil.
From which it's rootlets spring secure.

Thrice happy is the dreamer's lot!
All dearest impulses among
Breathed forth in glad and pleasant rhyme,
Laden with song the yod unseen.
Nature, sweet nature all around.
Basking midst sunshine, bird and bee—
Let those enslaved by toil and wealth abound,
Give me the singer's life, and I am free.

THE MAN WHO DIDN'T SUCCEED.
They sing of the men who build the mills
And girdle the earth with steel;
The bit of hour and wield the power
That moulds the public weal.
Honor to them that in honor do,
The work that the world must need,
And yet in chief I hold a brief
For the man who didn't succeed.

'Tis not to excuse the indolent;
A plea for the down and out;
Nor specious rot, condemning what
The leaders are about.
Merely to ask in a casual way
Of those who chance to read
For fairer view, and kinder, too,
Of the man who didn't succeed.
His house is small, his table light;
His family must endure
The snubs and sneers of the buccaneers
Whose debts fall on his poor.
Yet his is a home and no hotel.
His wife is a wife, indeed,
Whose nothing is above his children's love
To the man who didn't succeed.

Admitting it's true that he did not make
The most of his talents ten,
He won no pelf nor raised himself
At the cost of his fellowmen.
His hands are clean, his heart is white.
His honor has been preserved—
Now who are we to say that he
Is the man who didn't succeed?

SOUTH PARIS

Mt. Pleasant Rebekah Lodge Entertain.
Friday evening, October 22, Mt. Pleasant Rebekah Lodge entertained the Harrison and West Paris Rebekah Lodges. At seven o'clock a banquet was served at the Grange Hall. There were nearly two hundred sat down. There were 62 guests and with enough of Mt. Pleasant lodge to make the number. The company with their escorts, Mrs. Nettie Andrews, noble grand and A. D. Park, marshal, escorted the company to the strains of a march played by Mrs. H. E. Wilson to the dining room, after singing the doxology all were seated and did justice to the menu.

At eight o'clock they marched to the Odd Fellows' Hall where there were about fifty waiting them making a total of about 250. The lodge was called to order by the Noble Grand. The degree work of Mt. Pleasant Lodge was exemplified in a splendid manner. At intermission there was a short program of selections on the piano player, readings by Luther Hollis and Frank Clark, a solo by Mrs. Murice Noyes which was given in her usual pleasing manner and who responded with a sweet little lullaby. Mrs. H. E. Wilson accompanied.

At the close of the lodge a social hour was spent with the brothers and sisters of West Paris and Harrison. The guests came by automobile and had a most delightful evening for the trip. Committee on entertainment, Mrs. Virgil Wilson, Mrs. Murice Noyes and Jessie Tolman.

A "Safety-First" Mineral
Asbestos is a potential life-saver. We do not all realize, perhaps, that the fire proof theatre curtain is made of asbestos, which is rock matter but nevertheless almost soft and pliable as cotton or woolen fabric. Asbestos has of course many other uses. Its structure make it one of the most useful minerals for many and various structural purposes. It is used in making lumber, roofing, plaster, and stucco. Houses that are built largely of asbestos afford their occupants not only complete protection from fire because it is a "non-conductor," but assures them also the comfort of freedom from extreme heat and cold.

The asbestos-producing industry of the United States is growing. For years we have been the greatest manufacturers and users of asbestos, drawing our raw material from Canada, but now we are getting some excellent fiber in our own country. The most notable feature of the asbestos industry in 1914 was the development of a new field in Arizona, which is furnishing a grade of fiber that compares very favorably with the Canadian.

Author of Novels and Stories.
Among the summer visitors who come to Bridgton early in the season and remain into October, is the author of novels and short stories, Frederick Olin Bartlett, of Cambridge, Mass. With his family Mr. Bartlett arrives early in the spring, and lingers to enjoy the months of September and part of October in the country. They have a most attractive bungalow, facing Highland Lake, on the road to the White Mountains, but so hidden among the trees is the attractive cottage on the heights, that hundreds of automobilists whizz by in the summer and do not see it at all.

His mother being a native of Bridgton the author passed much of his boyhood here and so his love for the place is quite natural. He is interested in various plans for the improvement of the village, which he considers most beautiful from a scenic standpoint.

$454.50 for Rumford.

Judge Hanson took the case of the town of Rumford vs. the town of Upton to the jury's hands and awarded the town of Rumford $454.50. The action was brought to recover $600 for the support of the wife of George R. Campbell who came to Rumford and became a town charge. The question at issue was, "What is whiskey?" To repeat did Campbell, when he went from Upton to Dallas Plantation in June 1897, abandon his legal residence in the town of Upton? He claimed that he didn't and the town of Rumford agreed with him. But the town of Upton claimed that he left Upton with no intention of ever returning.

Answer Your Telephone.
For goodness sake answer your telephone! What do you have a telephone for if not to answer it and talk over it?

Most people do make a practice of answering their telephone calls rather promptly, but there are at least a few who have a confirmed habit of waiting till the second or third or fourth ring, or almost any time when it suits their fancy, before answering.

The time seems very long indeed to a person who is waiting on the line for an answer. We ought to think about this a little, trying to put ourselves in the place of a caller. We know how it is when we are trying to get a person who does not seem to care whether or not he answers his instrument.

It will make for one's own satisfaction and profit, as well as that of other people on the line and that of the telephone company itself, to say nothing of the convenience to the operator, if we get around to answer our calls just as promptly as we are conveniently able to do.

Water supply and sewage disposal are most important factors in the comfort of the farm dwelling. Where these permit, however, it is desirable to have the farmhouse stand in an open location facing the southwest, so that sunlight may enter all the rooms during the day. An abundance of ventilation is a necessity, and in most sections of the country the addition of sleeping porches will be found well worth while. The bedrooms should be large enough to allow each person at least 500 cubic feet of space, and preferably 1,000. In the construction of barns, it may be added, not less than 600 cubic feet should be allowed for each 1,000-pound animal.

RELIEVES THE WORST CASES OF CATARRH
Think "Hymel's the Most Wonderful Treatment for Catarrh Ever Discovered." Do not try to cure catarrh by using sprays or lotions; it cannot be cured in that manner. The only way in which this too common disease can be fully relieved is through a direct application to the affected parts that will kill the bacilli of catarrh and prevent their growth.

Breathing the air of Hymel's is the only known method of treatment that can really accomplish this. It is the simplest, most pleasant and probably the most reliable treatment for catarrh that has ever been discovered.

The complete Hymel's outfit is inexpensive and consists of an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hymel's to last several weeks. This will effect instant relief in ordinary cases, but for chronic and deep-seated cases of catarrh, longer use may be necessary, and then an extra bottle of Hymel's can be obtained for a trifling sum. It is not alone the best—it might be called the only method of treating catarrh, but it is also the most economical.

The Noyes Drug Store have so much confidence in the power of Hymel's to relieve catarrh, that they will for a limited time, sell this medicine under their personal guarantee to refund the money if the purchaser can say that it did not benefit.
